

Care instructions for wool blankets

All wool has a tendency to snuggle up gradually. The finer the wool, the more sensitive it is. Limit or avoid excessive loading of the blankets, e.g. they are not suitable as a seat cushion or for dressing the sofa. To get the blankets soft and airy, you brush them up. A blanket can be incubated several times using e.g. Velcro or a steel comb.

Hold the Velcro vertically and grasp at both ends with your thumb and forefinger. The bend on the Velcro "branches" should be in the same direction as you intended to brush. If you hold it correctly it should be easy to brush, not choppy and heavy.

Brush the blanket inside and out with long, even, sweeping features. Remember not to brush too hard - then it is easy to get stuck and pull away too much of the wool fibers.

Go through the blanket piece by piece until it is airy and even on the surface. Finish hanging out and carving the blanket.

Washing of your Klippan Blanket

Did you know that the wool has good properties which means that you do not need to wash it often. The wool is dirt repellent, i.e. the dirt settles on the surface. This is because the wool contains natural fats. One tip if you want to freshen up the blanket is to air it when it is a little damp outside. It thereby "purifies" itself. If you still want to wash the blanket, please follow the instructions below.
